

FIRST FAINT WHIR OF THE COMMUTER'S HYDROAEROPLANE IS IN THE AIR

Flying to Business Soon May Be as Common for Wealthy New Yorkers as the Present Use of Motor Car and Yacht

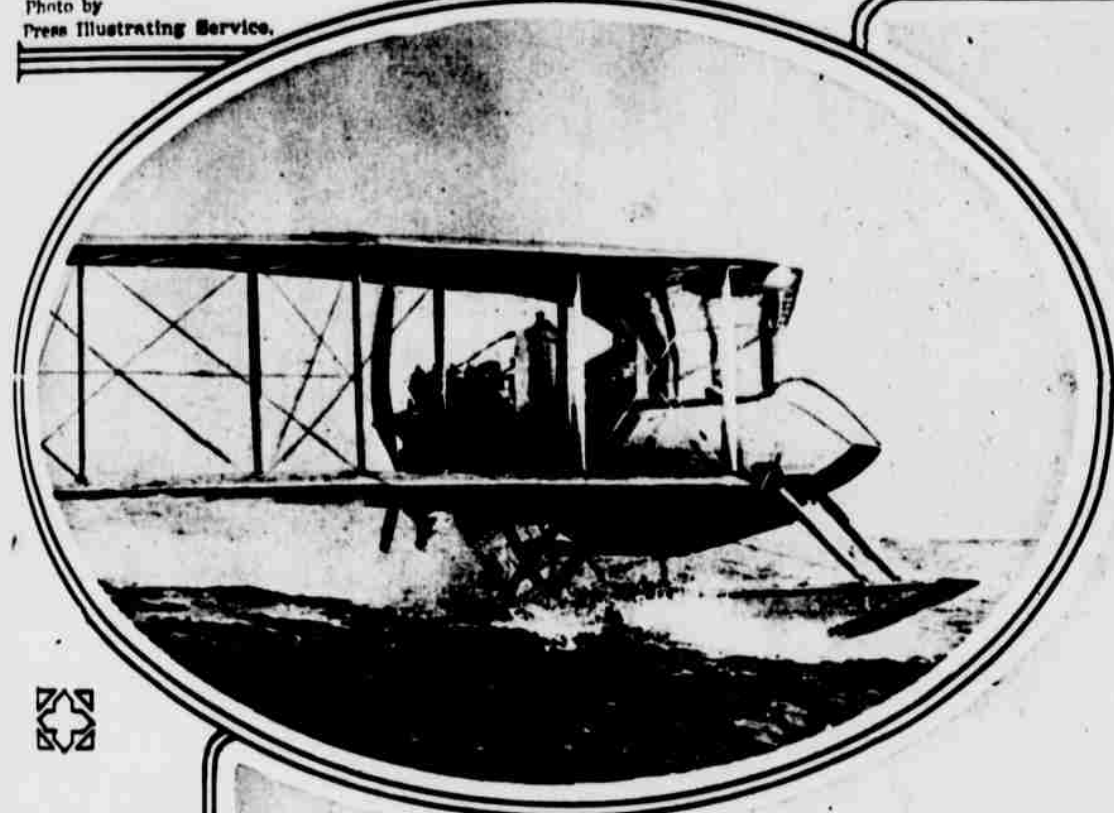

Frederick T. Davison, son of Henry P. Davison, is an enthusiastic student of aviation. He is here shown flying with D. H. McCulloch (right), instructor at the Rodman Wanamaker Aviation School.

Photo by Press Illustrating Service.

Vincent Astor, besides driving his own $14,000 hydroaeroplane, is an ensign in the 1st Aero Squadron, New York Naval Militia. He may soon be flying down from his country place at Rhinebeck, N. Y.

Photo by Paul Thompson

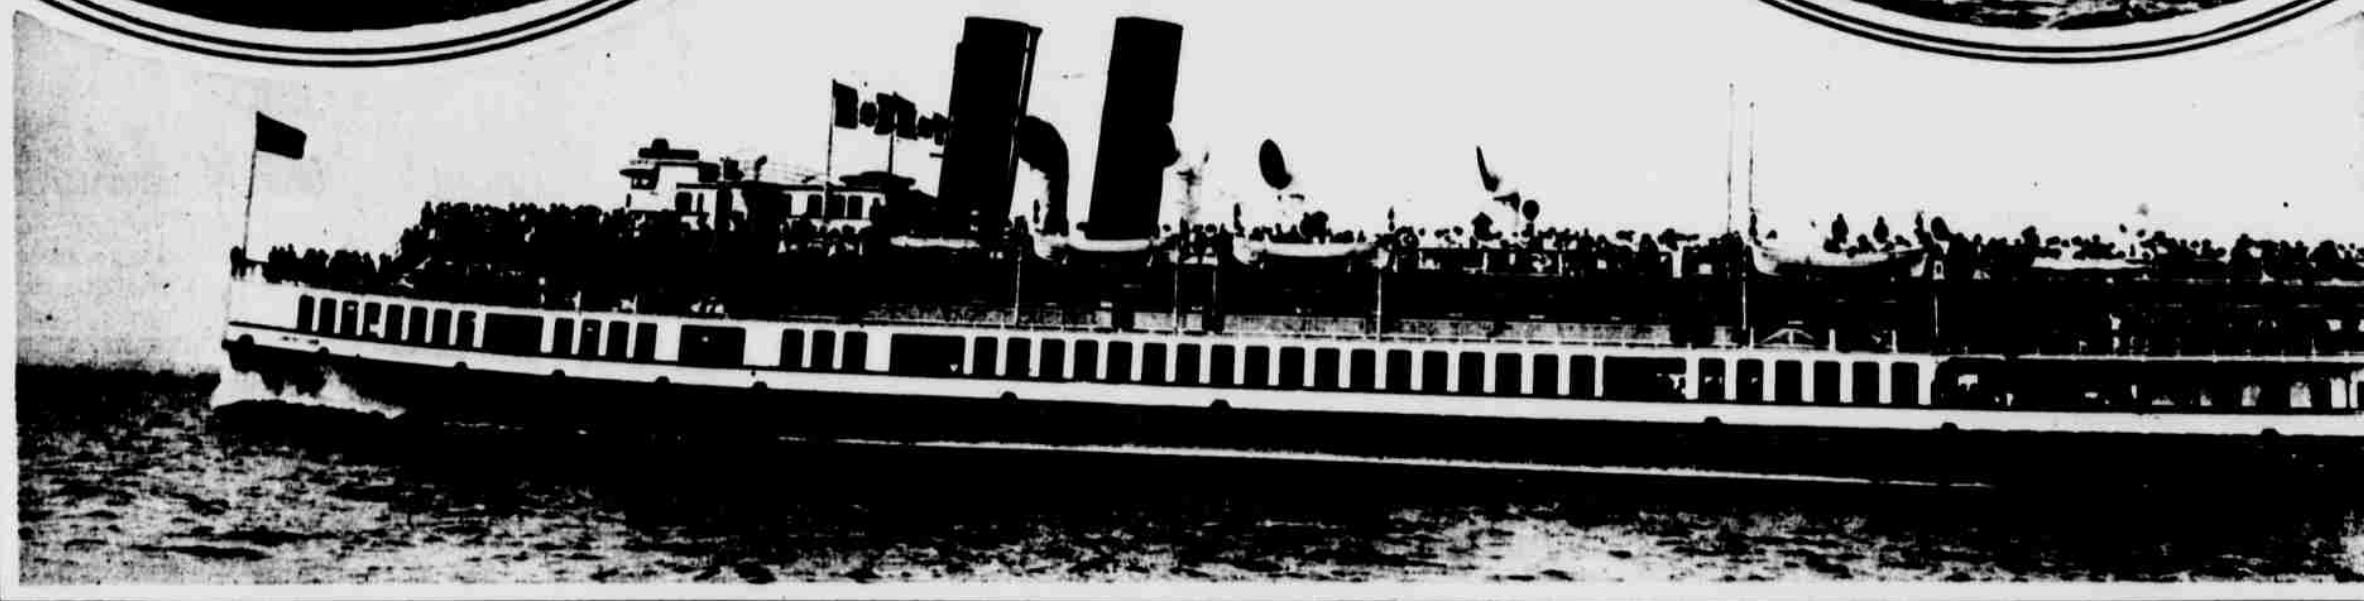

Vincent Astor skimming the surface in his hydro. He has been flying about a year.

Copyright, International News Service.

Howard S. Borden about to rise from the water near his Atlantic Highlands home.

Photo by Coleman

The Rival Commuters. Howard S. Borden flying over a Sandy Hook boat in the lower bay. Above, in circle—Device of the newly organized flying boat club.

UNITED STATES TREASURY DEPARTMENT TO BE A TOP LINER IN THE MOVIES

The Treasury Department of the United States is to be featured in the movies in a film drama, "The Adventures of Bill," written by Irvin Cobb and produced by the Vitaphone Company under the auspices of the American Bankers Association. The play is a lesson in thrift and many of the scenes are laid in the vaults of the Treasury at Washington. In the picture on the right Miss Walker is shown with John Burke, Treasurer of the United States, and Assistant Treasurer Phiel (left) holding $40,000,000 in new gold certificates, without doubt the largest amount of the real thing ever used as stage money. Secretary McAdoo, who is shown on the left talking to Miss Walker, will appear on the screen.